

WALTER SCOTT'S

Personality Parade

Q: Does The Profit's Marcus Lemonis have any tips for kids running a lemonade stand?

—Zach R., Columbus, Ohio

A: "Have great presentation, good signage, and carry more than lemonade," says the investor, who returns to CNBC on Oct. 14. "You can't run a business just by selling one thing." That, he adds, was the "flaw in the business model" of Crumbs Bake Shop, which he plans to rescue from bankruptcy and reopen with an expanded range of sweets and snacks. Get our favorite lemonade recipes at parade.com/lemon.

Joy Behar

Q: Would Joy Behar ever return to The View?

—Diana T., Annapolis, Md.

A: "No. I don't miss the job," says the former co-host, 71, who will celebrate her stand-up roots in the all-female comedy series Lipshtick in Las Vegas this month. As for Rosie O'Donnell's announced return? "She's audacious and a little bit dangerous. ... This will be must-see TV!"

WALTER SCOTT ASKS...

ARIANA GRANDE

The pop star, 21, releases My Everything, on Aug. 25.

Are you shedding your teen queen image with this album? It's definitely more mature sounding, but I don't feel like doing anything annoying or shocking to convey my maturity. I'll just have to wait patiently. I'm not rushing.

You boast a four-octave range. When did you first know you had a special voice? I was singing 'N Sync in the car when I was really young and did one of Justin Timberlake's high riffs and my mom said, "Was that you? Do that again!"

How do you feel about the cancelation of your Nickelodeon show Sam & Cat? I'm unhappy about it. It was a huge part of my life, but I'm excited for what's next and so are my fans. It's a great situation. Find out how to get Grande to follow you on Twitter at [parade.com/tweet.]

What was it like growing up in Boca Raton, Fla.? It made for a really great childhood. I grew up with my amazing, gold lamé-wearing, poker-playing grandparents, who are the greatest people on the planet! I'm proud to come from a fun-loving, mildly dysfunctional Italian family!

✉ Email your questions for Walter Scott to personality@parade.com.

Twister was the last big tornado movie. How will Into the Storm be different?

—Olivia S., San Diego

A: "Twister (1996) was an amazing film, and they did a great job with the technology and the tools that they had, but they didn't have as many videos of tornadoes for reference," says director Steven Quale, who pored over hours of real storm footage to create effects for his thriller Into the Storm, out now. "Ours is the next generation's approach. We're able to make them feel more realistic."

Amy Purdy and Derek Hough

Q: Does Derek Hough have a favorite partner from Dancing With the Stars?

—Sheri A., Arvada, Colo.

A: The five-time champion, 29, won't pick a favorite "because they've all been so different," but says dancing with Paralympian Amy Purdy this spring "was very special." The feeling is mutual for Purdy, a double amputee. "Fans don't know how grounded and spiritual he is. I loved spending time with Derek," she says. Who would you like to see join the fall cast of DWTS? Vote at parade.com/dwts.

SUNDAY FREEBIE

Enter for a chance to win a signed copy of Hough's memoir, Taking the Lead, at parade.com/win.